It also allows players to unlock the hidden Casino Night minigame, which allows the player to watch the game without actually participating in it, but without changing anything. Unlike other cheat devices, SA Censor Remover Online will not replace the San Andreas content with the Hot Coffee scenes and will not run off of modified or illegally copied files, the website claims. The website claims to work for both Windows and Mac OS platforms. SA Censor Remover Online's founder was inspired to start the website after playing Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas, noticing there was still an intact Hot Coffee scene after activating the cheats. The site has been accessed by 50,000 to 100,000 unique users each day since September 2007. A beta version of SA Censor Remover Online was leaked to the public on November 3, 2007. The cheat was removed after gaining attention. While SA Censor Remover Online offered no way to test the website, the company did offer step-by-step instructions to those who wanted to use the site to unlock the cheat. The website said that the only way to test the website was to obtain a version of San Andreas, modified with the cheat, from a pirated copy. A version of the game modified with the cheat code was also released on the Internet by players of the game on December 31, 2007. The website claimed that this was the only way to test the website. Gameplay The site allows players to unlock the hidden "Hot Coffee" scenes in the original version of Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas. The games' maker, Rockstar Games, originally released the game's copyright-protected material as part of the installable Rockstar Games software package for the PC, but removed the material from the retail version of the game. The cheat was added to unlock the "Hot Coffee" material in the original version of San Andreas. The code was later made available for the retail version of the game as well, after a legal action by some of the San Andreas players, and because of its popularity, San Andreas modders added the code to the game's script so that the player can see it without actually using it. The site allows players to watch the game without actually participating in it, by using scripts and/or having the file of the game in their computer altered. The game's copyright-protected code is hidden in the game files and can be used to unlock the Hot Coffee scenes without affecting 82157476af
